oil. This in itself will show what can be done in the production of power, and when it is considered that by its use all boilers, will be dispensed with and the engine run with a small tenk of oil, it will be seen what a revolution will be brought about here.

It is claimed that railroad engines will be run without the use of coal and at a cost that would not be believed if it were stated. The contrivance is so small that it can be taken anywhere and will do its work wherever coal oil is to be obtained and that is everywhere. Its value in mines and mining camps alone will be enormous.

Expense Is Slight.

Expense Is Slight.

But it is in the field of light that the invention will win its first and greatest victories. For street lighting it will produce a light four times as great as electricity and for about one tenth the cost. That is the statement made by the inventor and from the experiments made by them and in their presence the backers of the enterprise here are ready to back that statement. For searchlights on vessels and for use in the lighthouses along the coast, it will simply run everything else out of the market. Gas made from coal will never be thought of after this new light comes into general use. The cheapest gas made costs 62 cents per thousand; this new invention will give the same results at about 2 cents per thousand. There will also be a great saving in costly gas plants; with the new discovery nothing of the old gas plants will be needed but the tanks.

Columns could be filled with predictions as to what wonderful changes this discovery will bring about, but they would be only predictions after all. The fact still remains that a very great discovery has been made in the field of science, one of the greatest, it is thought, in the history of the industrial world. The men at the back of it are able and determined to push it to success; they are confident that they have a truly great thing; that it is something that will bring great fortunes to all connected with it and that it will prove a blessing to the human race.

Until these men are prepared to give out more definite information in regard Expense Is Slight.

until these men are prepared to give ont more definite information in regard to the matter the public can only speculate as to the outcome. It is certain that Sait Lake will be the center of scientific interest for many days to come after the new machine is put upon the market.

Roosevelt Continues His Campaign of Abuse.

Binghamion, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Completing over 1,100 miles of travel and having made over fifty speeches, Governor Roosevelt finished the first week of his state campaign in this city tonight. This was Governor Roosevelt's forty-third birthday. The speecial train was discarded by the party here and hotel beds were adopted for resting purposes tonight.

REPUBLICANS HOLD PARADE.

Help It.

Help It.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—For six hours and a half today workingmen from every branch of industry in Chicago, lawyers, merchants, railroad men and financiers, marched through the down-town streets of the city in the parade, which was planned as the culmination of the national Republican campaign in Chicago. Between two solid lines of spectators, stretched from the starting point of the long march on Michigan avenue, to its disbanding place on Jackson boulevard, near the river, and underneath thousands of flags and banners stretched between the big office buildings and waving from the windows and roofs, the paraders tramped from 10 in the morning until 4:30 in the afternoon.
